

Sowing Seeds of Resistance

Colombia Flower Unions, US Policy and the Struggle for Dignity

a talk by:

Lydia López, President of Untraflores
(National Flower Workers' Union)
in Colombia

Saturday
Nov. 3rd
6 - 8 pm

A perfect example of Colombia's complicated and painful truth is found in the flower industry. While we in the United States enjoy the beauty of store-bought flowers for special occasions; anniversaries, graduations, and birthdays; the Colombian flower growers are being exploited on a daily basis by giant US corporations. The United States is a primary destination of cut-flowers produced in Colombia. The Dole Food Company specifically is the largest exporter of these flowers.

ESCAPE COFFEEHOUSE 916 Williamson St.
next to Star Photo

co-sponsored by: Community Action on Latina America, Family Farm Defenders and Colombia Support Network