

the struggle for corporate accountability at the

Hermosa Factory

In 2005, the workers at the Hermosa factory were told they no longer had a job and wouldn't be paid the money they had earned.

The factory where they made sports apparel was closed and reopened under a different name. For almost 3 years, the Hermosa workers have been denied fair compensation and are suspected to be on a black list that prevents them from being hired at another plant. The web of contracting and outsourcing has provided an excuse for apparel companies and administrators to shun responsibility in this matter. Join us as we shed light on the dealings of the college apparel licensing process.

Featuring Scott Nova executive director of the Worker Rights Consortium (WRC) and Kate McCormack of the Madison-Arcatao Sister City Project

Friday April 4th at 7 pm check TITU

sponsored by the Student Labor Action Coalition and Community Action on Latin America